

Deranged, deluded, in denial and evil

Trump posted this on his social media platform yesterday:

I am not sure whether he was trying to prove that he is deranged, deluded, in denial and evil, but that is what he succeeded in doing.

The style is deranged.

The gloating over death is evil.

The denial is with regard to facts. If the Iranian forces are in the state he claims, how can they still be fighting back?

The delusion is in believing his own denial.

But what, most of all, I thought when reading this was that in August 1940, Goering told Hitler that the RAF had been destroyed. As a consequence, they change tactics. They also lost the Battle of Britain because they were also deranged, deluded, and in denial, as well as being evil.

The similarities appear remarkably uncomfortable, but remember, it took nearly 5 more years to beat fascism in Europe at that time.
