

Mandelson

There are four things to say about the the Mandelson papers:

- * Starmer knew about Epstein, as did McSweeney.
- * They appointed him anyway.
- * They did not care about the risks, the victims, or the truth.
- * All that mattered to them was creeping to a fascist.

McSweeney has gone.

Now Starmer should go.

And Labour too, because it has wholly embraced this logic.

There is not a lot more to say, except to note that fascism always corrupts. That is why it must be opposed.
