Regular commentators should now have noted that when you click to make a comment on the blog, you will now get access to a much better composition screen, which should make it much easier to lay out comments in ways with which most people are familiar, to spot errors, and to use a spellchecker.

As usual, my things go to Andy Moyle for creating this.

Andy and I are also now trialling a new comment moderation process. This is not finalised as yet. There will be more on this next week.
