Where did you come from?

We have begun to do some analysis on the feedback from our event in Cambridge on 28th February.

The thing that has surprised us, perhaps most of all, is how far people came to get to the event.

AI was used to create the following map, which excludes those who came from outside the UK, and we know that several people did come from places like Poland and Sweden. Because of the way in which the map was produced by AI, it has to be split into two parts:

The most common location for those attending was Cambridge itself, with London and other nearby towns being the next most popular locations. However, as is apparent, people came from all over the England, as well as from Wales and Scotland, and we are truly grateful and flattered that people did so.
