

Trump, and toxic power

I wrote about toxic power this morning, and then I noticed this from Tom Bergin (an old friend) and others in Reuters:

A REUTERS SPECIAL REPORT

Under the Trump crypto playbook, the family always wins. Investors don't

Risking little of their own money, the US president and his sons have added at least $2.3 billion to the family fortune from their main crypto ventures, while the investors they've wooed have taken a $2.3 billion hit, a Reuters examination found.

The report appears to be easily accessible.

This is what toxic power looks like. Trump and his family have simply fleeced gullible Americans (and maybe others) who believed in them, and should not have done.

If you want to know why we need to tackle toxic power, this is one reason.
