

Service will be disrupted

I do apologise if moderation is a little slow today. I am heading to Addenbrooke's Hospital soon for the second round of my treatment for a renal stone.

I am hoping they blast it to smithereens today, but I know a third round may yet be needed.

This treatment is bound to heavily disrupt my day and, because I will also be on some quite heavy painkillers for a while, I might not be at my best.

With luck, tomorrow will be better. But life does these unpleasant things, and today I have simply got to deal with them.
